

America's 50 Best Steakhouses

Love a good steak? Then these shrines to meat should be on your list

Dec 2, 2015 | 10:15 am By: Dan Myers

50 Best Steakhouses in America

Dan Myers, the senior Eat and Dine editor for The Daily Meal, previews our list of the 50 Best Steakhouses in America for 2015.

From grand Las Vegas carnivore temples helmed by world-famous chefs to old-school Middle-American chophouses where a ribeye is preceded by a visit to the salad bar, from clubby Chicago dining rooms loaded with mahogany and brass to New York institutions with now-household names, America has no shortage of great steakhouses. These are the 50 best.

#35 Gene & Georgetti, Chicago

The poet Carl Sandburg called Chicago the "Hog Butcher for the World," but its famous stockyards were long known as a source of great beef, too. Since 1941 this old-style Italian-flavored steakhouse (start your meal with Italian sausage and peppers, minestrone, or fried ravioli) has done beef proud. The steaks are broiled and dependably good; the bone-in filet mignon is not to be missed. A huge choice of non-steak items, including more than a dozen pastas and a fair amount of fish, is also served.