By: Coop Daley | Food & Drink

Thanksgiving is a special time for everyone. With a day off from school or work and an emphasis on family, plenty of folks take the day to cook an exuberant meal and enjoy it with their loved ones. Unfortunately, that can make it a day of great stress, as the pressure to provide a fantastic feast weighs on one's enjoyment of the holiday.

Lucky for you, plenty of local restaurants offer five-star Thanksgiving menus for dining in, giving you the opportunity to enjoy your meal without the stress.

Here are seven Chicago restaurants that take “giving” to a whole new level this year with some truly fantastic Thanksgiving menus.

Gene and Georgetti

500 N Franklin St.

While turkey is the typical staple of Thanksgiving cuisine, there are always a few that look for different options on the big day. Gene and Georgetti is one of the more popular steakhouses in the area, and it hopes to capitalize on this audience, offering both in-person tables on the holiday as well as take out of their famous dishes with a Thanksgiving twist.

For the Thanksgiving menu, guests have the option to choose a starter dish, main course, two sides and a dessert. While lacking in the typical “pass the potatoes” other locations might offer, the individual meals do offer a wide variety of options. Starters include the “Garbage Salad” and “Pumpkin Soup,” while main dishes include turkey, fettuccine bolognese, and a 38oz. ribeye steak appropriately titled the “Tomahawk.” Certainly worth a consideration, even for relatives across the country, because these steaks can be shipped!
